This approach promotes a holistic and deeper understanding of the subject being learned. Online technologies are offering us new opportunities to create communities of inquiry that allow for more active learning and which enhances students' critical thinking. Having learned the importance of such learning Carmel uses multiple online activities to supplement and strengthen the students' learning environment. After three months of a continuous process of online classes and activities now, the staff and students have improved in their virtual teaching-learning skills. ### World Environment Day

Carmel is known for teaching a value-based education so it takes initiatives to respect and love our environment too. Pandemic has changed everything around us and taught us the prime lesson of preserving the environment at all cost. The damage that is done is to be healed. We need to think about the solution. Class VIII made posters on Environment Day bearing appropriate slogans. Class IX students collected waste materials and created beautiful things under the title 'Best Out of Waste'.

Acts of Kindness

For the last four months (approx.), Corona warriors are fighting for us. One word of kindness can do wonders, so the students wrote an essay on 'Acts of Kindness during COVID-19'. The activity was for students from classes I to XII. In this unprecedented time, we need unprecedented kindness. The students of all classes were made aware of acts of kindness that bring life to the people who work for us.
